The Colt grip was cut with a diamond pattern and the backstrap was exposed. It filled the hand and offered comfortable control of the gun.

This Trooper dates back to 1974, and for this price, it's a bargain. For all practical purposes, the gun is a working man's Python.

Wear on this gun's blued finish was primarily at the muzzle—a classic sign of holster wear.

The first round in the Colt needs to be in the 11 o'clock position prior to cycling.
