The Medallion shows that Armscor is capable of producing a pistol with aesthetic appeal. But the extraction and accuracy problems were too much to overcome, in our view. For the same money, the Smith is a much better gun.

The Medallion produced malfunctions on two different occasions, resulting in a stoppage and a crushed case.

Checkering is painstakingly carried over to the grip safety.

The Medallion's key attribute is its high-gloss finish. Even the grip screws and trigger are blued and buffed.
